We identify as a cooperativa.

Our core belief lies in the inseparable bond between artisan and designer.
This partnership is not just important; it's the very essence of our studio.
We depend on our artisans to blend contemporary design with age-old techniques without sacrificing traditional heritage or production values.
It is our ongoing commitment to support this spirit through design around the world.

There are only 17 maestros in the world.
15 of them are making your Orphan Work lights.
These awards are from the Italian government and further solidify their status in the artisan world. To achieve this they must go through a rigorous set of curriculum of skill and knowledge. A steadfast commitment ingrained in passing down the wealth of craft knowledge to ensure its legacy.

Our alabaster undergoes millions of years of formation, mined in Northern Italy in an area renowned as the pinnacle of alabaster excellence. The abundant natural deposits in the region are globally recognized for their exceptional qualities, including compactness, transparency, intricate veins and hardness.
It's the very nature of the stone that shapes its pattern.
This pattern is only revealed through the process of carving away.

Our artisans wish to convey the message that they are not part of an assembly line. Instead, each fixture is meticulously crafted by a sole artisan in a small shop, set against the backdrop of Tuscany's ancient history dating back to the 8th Century BC.

Guided by the hands of skilled master artisans, each piece is meticulously turned from solid stone, revealing a flawlessly pure-white translucency complemented by subtle brown accents. The distinct pattern on each light fixture is shaped by the inherent qualities of the stone itself, brought to life through the expert use of artisan stone techniques.

OUR JOURNEY TO ITALY

Our clients are increasingly interested in origin.
Acquiring collections is driven by an interest in where the pieces come from, who made them and why.

Our journey to Italy began with serving private clients, creating lighting and fixtures for prestigious fashion houses in Milan. We recognized the significance of unveiling the narrative behind traditional Italian craftsmanship, which dates back to 1895.

Our fascination with alabaster grew as we uncovered its roots in ancient civilizations like the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans. In the Renaissance era, distinguished Italian sculptors like Michelangelo and Bernini utilized alabaster to create sculptures, highlighting the mineral's captivating translucent quality.

Our focus lies on the unhurried, methodical art of handmade craftsmanship. Each Orphan Work piece moves through many hands in its creation, a collaborative rigor of artisans imbued with the soul of Italy. Every creation is unique, carrying the essence of generations. Every shape is an ancestral shape retaining the mark of the maestro. The protectors of the history our ancestors gave us.

The Real Thing.

As you explore our collection,
we encourage you to hold these notes close to your heart.
Make Italian craftsmanship a part of your story and be a part of the commitment to support it through design around the world.
A celebration of the unhurried, methodical art of the handmade. It still exists.
